Feel like kayaking? Walking on a surrounding trail? Or just sitting on a bench and watching the gentle waves? You can do all of the above at Whistling Duck Pond—a peaceful place to spend lazy days on the water.

Named for a type of wildflower that grows here, Four O'Clock Park is also about the feeling of freedom at the end of the day whether you want to spend your afternoon working out on the fitness equipment, lounging in a hammock, or relaxing by the pond. (Or better yet, all three.)

FOUR O'CLOCK PARK

Leave plenty of time to spend at Waterbug Park. Because it's home to Wildlight's community pool, along with table tennis, cornhole, bocce, swings and so much more. Kids of all ages will have no problem finding ways to expend a little ... or a lot ... of energy here. (You're welcome.)

WATERBUG PARK

Sometimes all you need is a walk around water to gain a new perspective. Pioneer Park is named in honor of the early places at Wildlight that helped define our vision of health and wellbeing. It's the perfect place to take a stroll, reflect on your day, or regroup over the lunch hour.
